Side by Side in Honduras

Mission Trip | Feb. 6-13 Registration by Dec. 3

White's Chapel is sponsoring its first adult mission trip to Honduras Feb. 6–13, 2027. Volunteers will spend the week working alongside residents on a specified project. Depending on what residents identify as a priority, the team might help pour a concrete floor, build a latrine or improve a village school.

Registration closes Dec. 3, and space is limited to 24 participants.

White's Chapel will partner with Honduras Outreach, Inc. (HOI), a faith-based nonprofit that began with a small mission trip to Rancho El Paraíso in 1989. HOI programs have since reached more than 200 communities in the Agalta Valley and San Lorenzo. Visiting mission teams are only one part of its work, which also includes education, health care, agriculture and spiritual life.

HOI's community development program starts with a profile of each village. The staff gathers information about how many families live there, how many homes they share and what

The Secret to Thanksgiving

By Dr. John McKellar

In his sermon last week, Pastor Todd encouraged us to begin each morning with a simple prayer:

"Lord, help me recognize someone today who needs to know something of Your love. And if You give me the opportunity, help me not miss it."

I've been thinking about that prayer ever since. And the more I think about it, the more I believe Todd has given us one of the great secrets to Thanksgiving.

A grateful heart begins with open eyes.

Isn't it interesting how much of our unhappiness comes from focusing on ourselves? What we don't have.

A "Suite" Start to the Holidays

Avant Chamber Ballet brings Christmas magic close to home

"Nutcracker: Short & Suite" | White's Chapel | Sunday, Nov. 29 | 5:30 p.m. | Tickets: $10–$25

A wooden nutcracker, a daring adventure and a world of dancing sweets—some Christmas traditions are too enchanting to outgrow.

Avant Chamber Ballet will bring that holiday magic to White's Chapel when Apex Arts League presents "Nutcracker: Short & Suite" at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 29. The family-friendly performance offers an approximately one-hour introduction to the beloved ballet, accompanied by live piano music featuring Tchaikovsky's familiar score.

For children discovering "The Nutcracker" for the first time, the shortened production offers an approachable way to experience professional ballet. For parents, grandparents and longtime fans, it provides an opportunity to revisit a holiday favorite and share its magic with another generation.

The traditional story begins on Christmas Eve, when a young girl named Clara receives a wooden nutcracker from her mysterious godfather, Drosselmeyer. What seems an ordinary gift becomes

The Crane Has Landed

By Debbie McKellar

The crane arrived at White's Chapel in late October, and for a few days it seemed to have the best parking spot on campus. It certainly had the best view. From up there, you could see the steel going up for the Youth Center's third-floor addition. From down here, you could see that your usual route through the parking lot might require a little imagination.

Staff members were asked to park in the side lots during crane operations, leaving spaces at the front for guests and giving everyone a little more room to get around. As steelwork continued the following week, the Tuesday Bible Study buses kept their regular drop-off spot. Getting out took a little maneuvering. After dropping off passengers, drivers had to turn back the way they came. Even the buses had to learn a new way around campus.

The Fish Have a Say

Meanwhile, some of the most important work has been happening below eye level. If you wondered why there was a sizable hole near the rear Welcome Doors, here's why. Crews were laying pipe from the middle of the parking lot toward those doors, requiring a need to partially drain the pond. The new system will connect to existing storm drains, giving rainwater (when we get it…) a

A New Place for Hope

Meet the White's Chapel counseling team and step inside their new home in the Spiritual Life Center.

We're delighted to welcome you to our new offices, all upstairs in the Spiritual Life Center next to the Administration Building.

Counseling can be a place to build on what's going well, grow closer as a family or find your footing in a new season. Our counselors offer a confidential place to talk about what matters to you and what you'd like to change. They draw on the teachings of Jesus as appropriate to each client's needs.

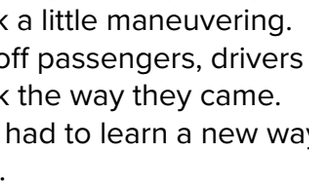

We'd love for you to get to know some of the counselors who make this ministry possible. If a counselor's experience seems like a good fit for you or your family, reach out directly to ask a question or schedule an appointment. We offer in-person and telehealth the beginning of an extraordinary adventure as Clara encounters an army of mice, a brave Nutcracker Prince and a magical kingdom filled with sweets.

Among the ballet's best-known characters are the mischievous Mouse King and the elegant Sugar Plum Fairy. Their contrasting personalities help create a world in which danger, courage and wonder unfold through movement and music. Even audience members unfamiliar with ballet can follow the emotions expressed through a dancer's gestures, a dramatic entrance or a playful exchange.

"Short & Suite" condenses the holiday classic into a program emphasizing its memorable dancing and music. The shorter format makes it especially appealing for families with young children while offering plenty for experienced ballet audiences to enjoy.

Young viewers can discover how dancers tell a story without speaking, while adults may recognize musical passages they have heard during Christmas celebrations for years. Live piano accompaniment brings dancers and musician together as Tchaikovsky's melodies shift from playful excitement to delicate, dreamlike beauty.

White's Chapel is fortunate to welcome Avant Chamber Ballet and to serve as a gathering place where the wider community can experience the arts. Through its partnership with Apex Arts League, the church offers families throughout North Tarrant County a convenient venue for professional performances, bringing a cherished holiday tradition close to home.

For families in Southlake, Keller, Grapevine and surrounding communities, the evening offers an opportunity to enjoy ballet together without a trip to Dallas. It also reflects the joy of opening the church's doors to neighbors for an experience that can become part of their own holiday traditions.

Whether the evening marks a child's first ballet or a familiar family outing, "Nutcracker: Short & Suite" offers a festive pause during a busy season—a chance to sit together, listen and step into a story where an ordinary Christmas gift opens the door to something extraordinary.

Tickets: $10–$25; available at apexartsleague.com or at the door.

services they can access. In some villages, families live in single-room homes with dirt floors and limited access to running water or sanitation. A village might decide that some homes need showers or that families sharing one room could use more space. Residents contribute their time and labor, and part of each volunteer's trip fee pays for supplies.

The White's Chapel team will stay in dorms at Rancho El Paraíso. HOI provides meals and security and takes volunteers from the ranch to the village each day. Returning to the same village throughout the week gives volunteers time to get to know the people they're working with.

Beverly Strait, one of the White's Chapel team leaders, has seen how that partnership works. On a previous trip, her team worked in a village where a church needed a restroom. Residents dug the pit, and volunteers helped mix cement and pass it in buckets. Every village has its own recipe for mixing cement, Strait said. Volunteers who've never mixed a batch can learn from the people who do it there.

"It's their work. We're just there to assist," Strait said.

In 2015, Strait flew from Kentucky, where she was living at the time, to Texas to join a friend on a mission trip to Honduras. She returned on later trips with teams from other churches and saw how the work varied from one village to the next. Those experiences helped inspire the trip she'll co-lead for White's Chapel. The specific February project is still undecided.

Strait said that in some communities, the government has provided a school building, and visiting teams have helped supply what goes inside. The jobs can be as simple as painting desks and chairs or putting things on classroom walls. What the volunteers do depends on what the school already has and what residents say would help.

Strait also described differences in the basic services available from one community to the next. She said most villages in the area have electricity, but access to running water is still limited. Water management and filtration are among the needs HOI is helping communities address.

For Strait, the chance to work side by side for a full week is one of the reasons she keeps going back. She talked about getting past language barriers and how much she enjoys spending time with the children. She remembers how amazed they were that people would give their time to come help. Those encounters are part of what she hopes White's Chapel volunteers will experience for themselves.

The $1,800 trip cost includes airfare, two hotel nights, lodging at the ranch, meals, transportation and security. HOI handles arrangements in Honduras, while Strait helps coordinate the trip at White's Chapel. She is available to talk with prospective volunteers about what to expect, from where they'll stay to what a typical day in the village looks like.

Anyone considering the trip can stop by the information table in the concourse Sunday, Nov. 15. Packets will include background on Honduras and HOI, along with photos from previous trips. It's a chance to see some of the work previous teams have done and ask questions before deciding whether to go. Additional questions may be discussed with Strait.

route to the pond and helping keep the anticipated rainwater from collecting in the parking lot. Paige DoByns, White's Chapel's executive director of operations and security, and Nick Schrader, the church's facilities manager, have been working with the construction team to coordinate access to the front entrance.

Which brings us to the question some of you—including Craig Rowley (official pond protector)—were already asking: What about the fish?

"The fish should be fine," DoByns said. Magnolia Fisheries visited the site and agreed the pond level could be lowered while leaving enough water for the fish. The plan is to lower it gradually to minimize disruption to neighbors.

Of course, there goes our big fundraising idea. We were going to mount a singing fish on a plaque and call it Bass for the Building. For an extra donation, we'd make it stop singing.

Things Are Looking Up

Exterior framing is underway for the Youth Center's third-floor addition and is expected to continue through November. Roofing is tentatively planned, weather and scheduling permitting. The team is aiming to get the addition "in the dry" the week of Nov. 23. That's construction shorthand for getting the building protected from the weather so work can move ahead inside.

There's also something in the works at ground level that will be much more fun to look at than a drainage pipe. New artwork is being designed for an 8-by-20-foot feature wall in the Youth Center entrance, near the ramp to the gym. Outside, crews are adding fall color to planting beds around campus.

Two pieces of paperwork have moved forward, too. The Tri-County easement agreement has been signed, and the property plat has been submitted for review. Neither required a crane, which may be why you didn't notice.

Cone Sweet Cone

As you come and go, please follow posted parking and traffic directions and keep areas marked by cones and barricades clear. "Just be mindful of where you're walking out in the parking lot," DoByns said. "Watch for loose dirt and uneven ground near active work areas. If you use a walker or wheelchair, look for a parking space with a clear, even route to the doors. With December activities just ahead, a little extra patience in the parking lot will help guests, staff and construction crews get where they need to go safely."

Thank you for making room for the work, whether that has meant parking a little farther away or taking a different turn on your way out. As DoByns put it, "We can share in those growing pains and get through those together."

There's something fitting about that as we head into Advent. We're making room for more young people to gather, find friends and grow in their faith. Someday they'll walk through those doors and head up to the third floor without giving a thought to how it got there.

Those of us who remember the crane, the cones and the great fish question will have a story to tell.

Sunday, Nov. 15 | 12:30–2 p.m.
Evans Hall

We invite you to join us for our very first WC Kids Family Mission Project. This special project involves supporting Operation Christmas Child. By filling ordinary shoeboxes with toys and other fun items, you can help provide boys and girls with what may be their first gift ever! These shoebox gifts are distributed by local churches in more than 100 nations during festive events where the Gospel is shared in a child-friendly manner. Each box, filled with items like soccer balls, dolls or stuffed animals, serves as a tangible expression of God's love to the child, their family and their community. During the event, families will come together to select gifts to send to children in need around the world. A pizza lunch and all gift supplies will be provided. There is a $10 registration fee per child to help cover processing and shipping costs for the shoeboxes.

Angel Tree Forest
Gifts due Dec. 6

The Angel Tree Forest once again fills the corridors at White's Chapel, continuing a tradition that began 19 years ago. Each tree holds tags for people served by a particular group, so participants can choose an area of outreach that matters to them. Families and individuals can adopt an angel by choosing a tag, purchasing the gifts listed and returning by Dec. 6. Each tag typically lists the recipient's name and one or more requested gifts. Participants can also make a donation or volunteer to sort gifts or deliver them to partner agencies. Gifts may be dropped off during church business hours.

Musings

What hasn't gone our way. What somebody said about us. What we wish were different. We can become so preoccupied with our own little world that we miss the wonderful things God is doing all around us.

It's hard to count your blessings when you're busy counting your disappointments!

But something wonderful happens when we begin looking outward instead of inward. We start noticing people. The lonely widow sitting by herself. The young mother juggling three children and a grocery cart. The tired employee who could use an encouraging word. The friend whose smile is hiding a broken heart.

And suddenly, ordinary moments become holy opportunities.

A telephone call. A handwritten note. A listening ear. A kind word. A little unexpected generosity. None of these things will make the evening news, but they just might make somebody's day. They might even change somebody's life.

And here's the beautiful surprise: When we become a blessing to someone else, we discover how blessed we really are.

That's the way God's Spirit works. The more love we give away, the more love we discover. The more encouragement we offer, the more encouraged we become. The more we notice God's goodness in others, the more grateful we become for His goodness to us.

So here's my invitation for the next few weeks. Before you reach for your phone, your coffee, or your list of things to worry about, begin your day with Todd's little prayer.

Then pay attention. Keep your eyes open. Look for the person God puts in your path.

Because Thanksgiving isn't simply a holiday we celebrate. It's a way of life we cultivate.

And perhaps the quickest way to fill our hearts with gratitude is to spend our days filling somebody else's heart with love.

After all, the happiest people aren't necessarily those who have the most blessings. They're the ones who recognize their blessings—and become one to somebody else.
